CONTENTS

Cover
Abstract
Acknowledgement

CHAPTER 1.....Introduction

    History of Bill International Bespoke Tailor
    Background
    Focus of Study
    Research Question
    Objectives of Study
    Benefits of Study

CHAPTER 2.....Literature Review

    Consumer Behavior
    Five Stages of Consumer Behavior
    Concept of Brand Image
    Self-Concept and Product-Image
    Conspicuous Consumption
    Product Related Criteria
    Marketing Factors Theory
    Marketing Mix Concept
    Conceptual Framework
    Hypothesis

CHAPTER 3.....Methodology

    Research Philosophy
    Research Approach
    Population and Sample Size
    Research Instrument
CHAPTER 4.....Results

General Data.............................................................................................................26
Purchase Behavior toward Tailor Made Suit.......................................................27
Factor Influence Buying Behavior..................................................................35
User Related Criteria.........................................................................................38
Hypothesis Testing............................................................................................41

CHAPTER 5.....Conclusion and Recommendations

Conclusion...........................................................................................................48
Discussion............................................................................................................49
Recommendations..............................................................................................50

REFERENCES AND RECOMMENDED READINGS